American Refusal of Air Support Is Used as Argument

Washington, May 15 (AP)-Differences appeared to be developing today between the American and French governments over Indochina as Communist gains in the war impose new strains on American and French nerves.

Diplomatic authorities here are privately concerned about the danger of injury to French-American cooperation in Europe as well as in the Far East.

The problem which they foresee is now to keep forthcoming talks on Indochina policy of the two countries from turning into exercises in blame-fixing for the unfavorable course of the fighting. Secret Parley

The secret talks are to take place in Paris initially between American officials and French leaders. A French spokesman here said it was "imperative" to have the discussions in order to determine just what American policy toward the Indochina war is.

The talks will be concerned with the possibility of internationalizing the war, which means bringing a number of other naand with American conditions for considering intervention.

Says U. S. Only Talks

There is already evident in talk about the failure of the U.S. administration to do anything but talk so far. There is a tendency to emphasize the American turndown of a French request for air aid in bombarding the Communist attackers of Dien Bien Phu argued that American air strength could save the fortress.

On the American side there is apparent a tendency to stress that the French were never willing to bring the United Nations into the 156th Field Artillery Battalion, French were not willing either, the Americans say, to give the United States a hand in training expressed some concern over the responsibilities in Indochina. State Democratic Chairman Richard H. Balch told a Freeman reporter this morning that Republican leaders were "making a shambles" of bipartisan approach to foreign policy.

Dr. Herman E. Hilleboe asked localities, all using water from the New York city reservoirs, to take stringent steps to wounded until possibly next week help ease "the impending serious because of their "critical condi- water shortage." He said the State Health Department was "gravely concerned about the water situation. The commissioner's plea was made in letters to officials of cities, villages, water districts and water companies directly or indirectly tied into the city system. They are in Westchester, Putnam, Ulster and Orange counties.

Noting that the city's reservoirs were only 84.9 per cent full last Thursday, Hilleboe urged the localities to stop using water for street-cleaning, check for leaky fixtures in public buildings and housing projects, teach school children to save water and restrict the watering of lawns. He reminded the localities that similar steps had been taken in New York city.

ST. LAWRENCE SEAWAY PLAN

Half a century of bitter wrangling has ended now that the St. Lawrence Seaway Project is to all intents and purposes an approved program. It means ocean-going commerce can now come to all the Great Lakes ports from Toledo eastward.

Probably few projects in American history match this one for the perennial persistence of both its advocates and its critics. Again and again and again it has come before Congress, sometimes to be voted on, sometimes not, but never until now to win the endorsement of both houses.

Railroad, coal, power and seaport interests formed the opposition, and stout it was. For a long time the proponents argued mainly that the growth of commerce would be good for American interior ports and would bring goods to the midlands at lower

In the last eight years or so, however, they have shifted their ground. They have contended that the seaway was of prime necessity as a defensive measure, because it was a means of bringing vital foreign iron ore via a protected waterway to inland steel or via a protected wa

The argument appeared to have force. President Eisenhower took it up and made the seaway one of his major program fea-

At the same time, some of the opposition, crumbled when the power project was divorced from the navigation plan. A separate start was made on St. Lawrence power development under the International Joint Commission two years ago.

Provision to make the project self-liquidating financially further improved the seaway's chances in Congress, cutting strength from those who said it was economically not

The real final blow, though, was undoubtedly the decision of the Canadian government in late 1951 to build the project alone if the United States insisted on further delay.

Government officials and lawmakers in this country realized the seaway was going to be built anyway, and as a practical matter it seems sensible the United States should gain a major share in the control of so important a waterway.

When completed, the proposed system of locks, canals and deepened channels will allow vessels of 10,000 tons to pass from the Atlantic to the western edge of Lake Erie (later improvements may permit passage to Duluth). America is expected to pay $105 million toward the final cost, and Canada some $200 million.

Since we are now committed to this longdisputed project, we must hope that the confidence reposed in it by its advocates is not misplaced and that its value will be fully demonstrated.

We must hope as well that any adjustments it forces in existing internal transportation arrangements can be digested without disruption of the nation's economy.

The morning hours get more expensive as the weeks roll by. The price of coffee seems to be on a one-way ladder.

"The Spirit of St. Louis" is an account of Lindbergh's celebrated solo flight across the Atlantic Ocean. But it is more than a personal account of an important event, for it contains a testament to the power of a man to endure and persevere in the face of enclosing 10 cents, to cover cost of handling disappointment, danger and hardship, to win a goal. THE SANTA FE CASE

The failure of the Congress to revise the Taft-Hartley Law in this session brings to the fore the case of the Santa Fe Railroad, which is fighting through the courts the question of the closed shop. While railroads do not come under this act, whatever decision is handed down by the Supreme Court may affect every industry.

The basis for the legal argument was started by F. G. Gurley, president of the Santa Fe System Lines, as follows:

". . . This young man (a railroad employe) had been a member of the appropriate labor organization. The time came when unfortunately both his wife and his child became ill. He encountered unusual expenses which caused him to be in debt and he became delinquent in his dues to the labor organization. When he became delinquent in his dues he was no longer in good standing and, under the agreement between the labor organization and the railroad in question he was discharged. Of course this did not help him pay his debts nor did it help him or his family in the pursuit of happi-

This young man was one of 13 Santa Fe employes who testified at Amarillo, Texas, against both the unions and the railroad, parties of an agreement. In due course, the railroad lined up with these 13 employes against the unions. Thus far, the Supreme Court has never decided a "rightto-work" case. In the instance of the one worker quoted, the issue is so clear:

1. He is not opposed to unions;

2. He belonged to a union; 3. Because of circumstances beyond his control, he fell into arrears in dues payments; 4. He did not deny his obligation but could not 5. Therefore, the union rejected his right to

The question then is: Does the law-any lawthe Railway Labor Law or the Taft-Hartley Law, authorize a union to forbid a man to work because he falls into arrears in union dues payments? Morally, the question is whether a man's responsibility to his family, in a tight financial situation, is greater than his responsibility to his union. The answer to both questions could be that the man could borrow money to pay his dues, but is it public policy to force a man into debt to a bank or a loan shark when he might be in debt to his union, meeting that debt as his situation cleared up? Even taxes can be postponed upon application.

Mr. Gurley makes the point: "The payment of dues to the union cannot properly be likened to taxes. Taxation is a sovereign power and may be exercised by the government alone. There is not the slightest basis for the levying of taxes by a labor union or by any other private association.'

The union's argument against this is that the unions obtain benefits for the men which are advantageous both to those who join unions and those who do not. Why should there be any free riders? That involves the further argument that compulsory membership requires a renunciation of the cause of his superior abilities? Actually, in many played an accompaniment for the of the Democratic Party, I'd take industries when such more able workers are dis- sultry-eyed movie star who sat care of him." covered, they are singled out, given titles which do not come within the union agreements. Sometimes they are called "executives."

Mr. Gurley puts it this way: . . . Suppose a law were passed providing that management could require as a condition of employment that all employes must belong to an industry protective association, formed to advance the welfare of the industry as a whole. A strong argument could be made that the corporate employer, by financing, organizing and managing the business, is providing the opportunity for employment which is so vital to the employes, furnishing about that elsewhere. them as it does with the means of earning a liveli-

That Body of Yours

By JAMES W. BARTON, M.D.

EPILEPSIA

I write frequently about epilepsy because today our family physicians are able to control what was once a most dreaded and embarrassing disease.

Many of us have seen an epilepsy victim suffering a seizure. Fortunately, we see few of them now. However, there are epileptics and families of epileptics who seem to be unaware of the great progress made in the study and its successful control by drugs available today.

A couple of days ago I received a large book which was called Epilepsia, the Journal of the International League Against Epilepsy, the foreword of which stated:

"The study of epilepsy embraces many disciples and the content of Epilepsia should be a reflection of that fact. Its pages will be devoted mainly, but not exclusively, to critical reviews on any aspects of the many problems related to epilepsy. The objective of this journal is to afford a medium | Club of for presentation of thoughtful analyses of what is | Church. known and of the gaps in our knowledge and understanding.

Dr. Paul W. Pruyer, National Veterans Epilepsy Center, Veterans Administration Hospital, Boston, states that (1) the problem of the existence of a specific epileptic personality or a special cluster of personality traits typical of epileptics is of special interest, (2) the problem of the emotional adjustment of epileptics and the way in which efforts toward adjustment may be complicated by social and psychological effects of epilepsy, (3) the complications present with personality problems yet not directly related to epilepsy itself, (4) the problem of the deterioration in epileptics, not only of intellectual functions but also in a sense of unfavorable regressive or backward peronality changes. These various problems overlap considerably and their treatment in various studies has been rather Now the question arises as to whether there is specific personality. Dr. H. Rorschach, a pioneer in epilepsy with his personality tests, firmly beieves there is an epilepsy personality, while Dr. W. F. Lennox, the noted Boston authority on epilepsy, states that epilepsy does not conform to a set pattern but has many variations. In any case, the control of epilepsy by preventing seizures entirely or in controlling or lessening their effects is now possible by the use of the phenobarbital and the barbiturate drugs. Cutting down on all liquids and all starch foods (potatoes, sugar, bread, pastries) and increasing the fat foods (butter, cream, egg yolk, fat meats) is most help-

ST. LAWRENCE SEAWAY PLAN

Half a century of bitter wrangling has ended now that the St. Lawrence Seaway Project is to all intents and purposes an approved program. It means ocean-going commerce can now come to all the Great Lakes ports from Toledo eastward.

Probably few projects in American history match this one for the perennial persistence of both its advocates and its critics. Again and again and again it has come before Congress, sometimes to be voted on, sometimes not, but never until now to win the endorsement of both houses.

Railroad, coal, power and seaport interests formed the opposition, and stout it was. For a long time the proponents argued mainly that the growth of commerce would be good for American interior ports and would bring goods to the midlands at lower

In the last eight years or so, however, they have shifted their ground. They have | who do not. Why should there be any free riders? contended that the seaway was of prime necessity as a defensive measure, because it was a means of bringing vital foreign iron ore via a protected waterway to inland steel union insists upon, rather than the better pay bemills.

The argument appeared to have force. President Eisenhower took it up and made the seaway one of his major program fea-

At the same time, some of the opposition, crumbled when the power project was divorced from the navigation plan. A separate start was made on St. Lawrence power development under the International Joint Commission two years ago.

Provision to make the project self-liquidating financially further improved the seaway's chances in Congress, cutting strength from those who said it was economically not feasible.

The real final blow, though, was undoubtedly the decision of the Canadian government in late 1951 to build the project alone if the United States insisted on further delay.

Government officials and lawmakers in this country realized the seaway was going ter it seems sensible the United States should gain a major share in the control of so important a waterway.

When completed, the proposed system of locks, canals and deepened channels will allow vessels of 10,000 tons to pass from the Atlantic to the western edge of Lake Erie (later improvements may permit passage to Duluth). America is expected to pay $105 million toward the final cost, and Canada of the many problems related to epilepsy. The some $200 million.

Since we are now committed to this longdisputed project, we must hope that the confidence reposed in it by its advocates is not misplaced and that its value will be fully demonstrated.

We must hope as well that any adjustments it forces in existing internal transportation arrangements can be digested without disruption of the nation's economy.

The morning hours get more expensive as the weeks roll by. The price of coffee seems to be on a one-way ladder.

"The Spirit of St. Louis" is an account of Lindbergh's celebrated solo flight across the Atlantic Ocean. But it is more than a personal account of an important event, for it contains a testament to the power of a man to endure and persevere in the face of disappointment, danger and hardship, to win a goal. It is the story of a brave dream brought to reality by a brave and modest man.

At the time of his flight across the Atlantic Lindbergh became a national hero. In the years that have followed he has known his story, show that he has grown in stature many honors, even as he has come to know heartbreak and disappointment. THE SANTA FE CASE

The failure of the Congress to revise the Taft-Hartley Law in this session brings to the fore the case of the Santa Fe Railroad, which is fighting through the courts the question of the closed shop. While railroads do not come under this act, whatever decision is handed down by the Supreme Court may affect every industry.

The basis for the legal argument was started by F. G. Gurley, president of the Santa Fe System Lines, as follows:

". . . This young man (a railroad employe) had been a member of the appropriate labor organization. The time came when unfortunately both his wife and his child became ill. He encountered unusual expenses which caused him to be in debt and he became delinquent in his dues to the labor organization. When he became delinquent in his dues he was no longer in good standing and, under the agreement between the labor organization and the railroad in question he was discharged. Of course this did not help him pay his debts nor did it help him or his family in the pursuit of happi-

This young man was one of 13 Santa Fe employes who testified at Amarillo, Texas, against both the unions and the railroad, parties of an agreement. In due course, the railroad lined up with these 13 employes against the unions. Thus far, the Supreme Court has never decided a "rightto-work" case. In the instance of the one worker quoted, the issue is so clear:

1. He is not opposed to unions;

2. He belonged to a union; 3. Because of circumstances beyond his control, he fell into arrears in dues payments;

4. He did not deny his obligation but could not 5. Therefore, the union rejected his right to

The question then is: Does the law—any law—the Railway Labor Law or the Taft-Hartley Law, authorize a union to forbid a man to work because he falls into arrears in union dues payments? Morally, the question is whether a man's responsibility to his family, in a tight financial situation, is greater than his responsibility to his union. The answer to both questions could be that the man could borrow money to pay his dues, but is it public policy to force a man into debt to a bank or a loan shark when he might be in debt to his union, meeting that debt as his situation cleared up? Even taxes can be postponed upon application. Mr. Gurley makes the point:

"The payment of dues to the union cannot properly be likened to taxes. Taxation is a sovereign power and may be exercised by the government alone. There is not the slightest basis for the levying of taxes by a labor union or by any other private association.'

unions obtain benefits for the men which are advantageous both to those who join unions and those who do not. Why should there be any free riders? That involves the further argument that compulsory membership requires a renunciation of the liberty of person. Suppose an individual can do bet to wow a capacity audience at a voice of the club, "since of the club, " ter for himself by not joining a union, should he be compelled to accept the basic pay, which the cause of his superior abilities? Actually, in many industries when such more able workers are discovered, they are singled out, given titles which do not come within the union agreements. Sometimes they are called "executives."

Mr. Gurley puts it this way: ". . . Suppose a law were passed providing that higher office. management could require as a condition of employment that all employes must belong to an industry protective association, formed to advance engagement to the scene of his the welfare of the industry as a whole. A strong earlier "crime. argument could be made that the corporate employer, by financing, organizing and managing the business, is providing the opportunity for employment which is so vital to the employes, furnishing them as it does with the means of earning a liveli-

Wed Hair Style to Your Headdress

Select a headdress that complements both gown and facial type and then have your hair styled to go with it. That's the advice of hair stylist Michael of the Waldorf. Here (upper left) he creates a hairdo for an angular face. Smooth at top to accommodate headdress, it lends softness at temples. Shallow pillbox (upper right) becomes this bride's sophisticated features. Pearl coronet (lower left) is Michael's choice for one whose look is elegant. He recommends a floral wreath for the means easy money in the sterling bloc, a situation that has existed in this country for some time.

Stocks rushed ahead immediately in London where the move came as a surprise although it has been anticipated to some extent. And in New York that day, there was such a scramble to buy stocks that price reporting facilities were swamped briefly. The strength in stocks here was branded purely psychological or coincidental.

A more fundamental piece of news was the fact that American corporations issuing public reports paid 3 per cent more cash dividends in March than a year ago. Incidentally, the Associated Press average of 60 stocks on March 31 this year stood 4.8 per cent over the same date in the previous year.

On Monday this week the stock market edged ahead slightly to send the AP average up to a new high mark. The market's action was devoid of any snap.

JCC Will Begin Day Camp July 5

Beginning Monday, July 5 and continuing through Friday, August 27, the Jewish Community Center will start its summer day camp, it was announced today by Attorney Abraham Streifer, president of the Center's board of directors. The Center Day Camp will provide for eight full weeks of worthwhile activity for children between the ages of five and 12.

Under the general supervision of S. Lewis Gaber, center director, the camp staff will bring its specialized skills to a program of summer recreational and cultural activities directed at the appropriate children's levels.

The camp will be located at Spring Lake, Lucas avenue. Transportation will be provided by chartered bus from the Center to the campsite, with a few selected pick-up stops on Broadway.

Mrs. William Zwick, Day Camp chairman, points out that because of the limited enrollment early application is essential to assure accomodations for children. Further information and application blanks may be secured by visiting the Jewish Community Center, 265 Wall street.

Teenage Bully Beats Two Little Boys in Alley

Camden, N. J., May 15 (AP)-A teenage bully beat and tortured two little brothers caught in an alley on their way home from school, stabbing the older child about 200 times with a lead pencil. Police said the victims of yesterday's vicious attack—John, 9, and Joseph, 7, sons of Mr. and Mrs. John Doto—stumbled arm in arm from the alley and slumped to a curb. A passing salesman drove the bleeding and partially disrobed pair to Cooper Hospital. Police described the attack as "one of the worst cases of cruelty we have ever seen." The children told authorities this story:

They were on their way home from Our Lady of Mount Carmel parochial school when the unknown attacker pulled them into an alley and demanded money. The brothers told him they had none and the bully struck them. A woman noticed the disturbance and ordered the older boy to leave.

The two youngsters hurried homeward but were stopped a second time in another alleyway.

means easy money in the sterling bloc, a situation that has existed in this country for some time.

Stocks rushed ahead immediately in London where the move came as a surprise although it has been anticipated to some extent. And in New York that day, there was such a scramble to buy stocks that price reporting facilities were swamped briefly. The strength in stocks here was branded purely psychological or coincidental.

A more fundamental piece of news was the fact that American corporations issuing public reports paid 3 per cent more cash dividends in March than a year ago. Incidentally, the Associated Press average of 60 stocks on March 31 this year stood 4.8 per cent over the same date in the previous year.

On Monday this week the stock market edged ahead slightly to send the AP average up to a new high mark. The market's action was devoid of any snap.

Teenage Bully Beats Two Little Boys in Alley

Camden, N. J., May 15 (A)-A teenage bully beat and tortured two little brothers caught in an alley on their way home from school, stabbing the older child about 200 times with a lead pencil.

Police said the victims of yesterday's vicious attack-John, 9, and Joseph, 7, sons of Mr. and Mrs. John Doto—stumbled arm in arm from the alley and slumped to a curb. A passing salesman drove the bleeding and partially disrobed pair to Cooper Hospital. Police described the attack as "one of the worst cases of cruelty we have ever seen." The children told authorities this story: They were on their way home from Our Lady of Mount Carmel parochial school when the unknown attacker pulled them into an alley and demanded money. The brothers told him they had none and the bully struck them. A woman noticed the disturbance and ordered the older boy to

The two youngsters hurried homeward but were stopped a second time in another alleyway.

After two years of private sponsorship, the Town of Esopus American Legion is seeking to make continuation of Little League baseball a township responsibility. Every business organization in the Town of Esopus is being asked to make a contribution in a $500 fund raising program. The money will be spent to replace equipment and purchase new uniforms. Roger Mabie, chairman of the fund drive, points out that during the past two years there was spent more than a thousand dollars for uniforms, equipment and insurance

Further financial assistance is needed, if the league is to continue. The esprit de corps runs high in the Town of Esopus. That's why we feel the $500 goal will be achieved.

Wonder how many bowlers realized that only one "700" had been posted in the Ferraro Major from Sept. 1953 until George Shufeldt and Randy Kelder hit the jackpot Thursday night, Shufeldt's ascendancy to high average honors in place of the perennial leader, Johnny Ferraro, proves that bowling, like any other precision sport, places a high premium on accuracy. Shufeldt's ball is not overpowering but he is a sharp pocket hitter and has been climbing steadily toward the top of the local heap. The 50 Club is readying a major sports announcement, Bill Leuschner may collaborate with Fred Davi to bring Satchel Paige and the Harlem Globe Trotters baseball club to municipal stadium in June. Hank Hotaling, manager of the National Little League Tigers, is a patient at the Kingston Hospital.

The Ferraro Major League's present 14-team setup will be scrapped in favor of a more balanced 8-team circuit with a 935-average ceiling next year. Collectively, Bill Burke's pitching staff may set a record never before approached in KHS annals before the current season is over. The team doesn't have a Bill Thomas or Clark Mains but we can't recall the last time Kingston High had a staff of three standouts as evenly matched as Bruce Bechtold. Frank Reis and Jack Houghtaling. The City Baseball League, busting out all over with a new president and new spirit, meets Monday night. Now is the time for all good candidates for the secretary's post to show their hands. It's the nation's newest and biggest military tank, with fire-power to outslug any tank in the world today. Designed by Army Ordnance and Chrysler engineers at the Detroit Arsenal, the T-43 has been in production at the Newark plant for more than two years. The giant completes an entirely new series of U.
